

[Q-53] How can you pick a random item from a list or tuple?

- In Python, you can randomly sample elements from a list with `choice()` , `sample()` , and `choices()` of the `random` module. These functions can also be applied to a string and tuple. `choice()` returns one random element, and `sample()` and `choices()` return a list of multiple random elements.